The University of Iowa History of Medicine Society announces the R. Palmer Howard Dinner for 2012

FRIEDAY, APRIL 13, 2012

Lynda Payne
Prof. in Medical Humanities & Bioethics, and History, Univ. of Missouri Kansas City will speak on

Spot Ward, Crazy Sally, and the Chevalier Taylor: Three Medical Quacks in Eighteenth-Century Britain

Quacks and their remedies were big business in 18th Century Britain and they were thorns in the sides of regular practitioners. When William Hogarth mockingly portrayed physicians in "The Company of Undertakers" in 1737, he chose three famous quacks to lord it over the learned doctors. Come hear the surprising stories of "Crazy Sally" Mapp (center), Joshua "Spot" Ward(left) and "Chevalier" John Taylor
