Cape Town 1967

Thursday, September 23, 2010, 5:30-6:30
Room 401, Hardin Library for the Health Sciences
Light refreshments will be served

The world was shaken when an unknown South African surgeon, Christiaan Barnard, performed the world's first human-to-human heart transplant in 1967. Come hear the story of how the groundwork was laid, the young donor gave up her life, the recipient was selected and the world reacted to this magnificent surgical feat.

Upcoming Presentation:

George W. Beran, D.V.M., PhD, Prof., Emeritus Veterinary Microbiol. & Prev. Medicine, ISU
One Health: Human and Animal Rabies, an issue in human and animal relations
Thursday, October 28, 2010, 5:30-6:30
